18 Fish 48.77 lbs

A new club record! No strangers to Kentucky Lake, Griff and Mike shattered the old club heavy stringer record set by Greg & Andy Shands in 2011 at Lake of the Ozarks of 42.05 pounds (16 fish) by weighing in 18 bass totaling 48.77 pounds at the club's first ever June Kentucky Lake tournament. Griff & Mike were fishing ledges on the north end of the lake by the dam throwing Carolina Rigged soft plastics and Jigs. First Place Payout was $284

Lake News

Kentucky Lake had some of the biggest stringers in club history. Each of the top 4 places had bags over 30 pounds with combined weight over 160 pounds. Jeremy Goins and Nathan Keith also broke Greg & Andy's old record with a total weight of 42.86 pounds and that only earned them second place! While the majority of the damage was done Kentucky style out on the ledges, there were also some good quality bass hanging out in the shallows and around boat docks. I want to congratulate each and every member who came to Kentucky with no prior experience fishing ledges and competed with a positive attitude, eager to learn and try a new fishing technique.

Out on a Ledge....

When I headed down to Kentucky Lake, I had a vague understanding of what ledge fishing was from reading articles and watching YouTube videos. Similar to most Missouri bass fishermen I know, I consider myself a top-notch "bank beater" looking for bass hanging around laydowns, points and shady docks. I had never fished Kentucky in June and knew that fishing ledges was what this lake is known for during this time of year. I hired a guide on Thursday to help speed up my learning curve and teach me how to catch those pesky bass offshore. While I still consider myself a novice at ledge fishing, I am going to try my best to pass on what I learned from the guide and from my time at Kentucky Lake in case you are still scratching your head about this whole ledge fishing thing.

First, What is a ledge? The textbook definition says it is a form of structure that can be found at the edge or bank of an old creek channel or the main river channel that remains underwater after the flooding of a reservoir. A definition I like better is defined as the upper lip of a drop. (It is possible to have a series of drops and ledges, like stair steps progressing down towards the deeper water. The best way to explain it is to show you what we are talking about:

On the topographical map above of Kentucky Lake, I am pointing out 3 distinct ledges. Ledge A drops down into the main river channel and is near deeper water. Ledge B & C are at the edge of an old creek bed where it pours out into the main creek. These are usually easy to see on topographical maps as you look for lines close together (meaning rapid depth change) next to area of more constant depth like a flat or creek bottom.

Now that you have found ledges on your topo, you will need to determine which ones have bass on them. For this you will need to use your sonar to scan the ledges to look for large concentrations of bass. How do I scan? The correct way to scan a ledge is to drive your boat at idle speed in a "stitch" pattern across the ledge keeping a sharp eye on your sonar. See the RED trail line below depicting what I am talking about.

Remember that a ledge is usually a long stretch of area and it can take some time to scan it properly. The guides and pros spend a lot of time scanning these ledges looking for big schools of bass because they know that when they find them they can load the boat quickly.

If your electronics allow, it is best to have your GPS topo map up to let you see the contours of the ledge with the screen split showing sonar or downscan. While downscan helps me to better identify types of fish and structure, it is not a requirement for scanning ledges for bass. In fact, our guide did not have downscan or side-scan and used only traditional sonar to find schools of bass.

What exactly am I looking for?

If you're not the best at picking out fish on your electronics, ledge fishing is for you! Big concentrations of fish on ledges are easier to see than scattered bass in a brushy lake. These sonar shots depict some good groups of bass. If you see this on your sonar drop a marker buoy at the side of the boat IMMEDIATELY!

Below is an actual screen shot from Jeremy Goins boat on Kentucky Lake taken Friday night before the tournament. Jeremy went to this spot on Saturday morning and did a quick scan to see if the bass were still there and caught multiple keepers out of this school before 8am. Note how the bass are in about 25' of water sitting in a little depression away from the ledge so they can attack the baitfish from below. Jeremy watched another boat pull up close about 20 yards away and try to fish the same spot; however, they didn't catch a thing because they were too far away from the school. This is why it is so important to scan and pinpoint the exact location of these bass with a marker buoy before you make a cast.

Jeremy & Nathan (2nd place) caught their fish on 4" worm drop shot (wacky rigged), 3/4 oz green pumpkin jigs, Texas Rigged Red Shad Monster Worms and 8XD crankbait in Tennessee Shad.

Additional Tips / Hints:

- If you catch multiple fish out of a school and the bite dies, the fish may have moved or just scattered. Get back behind the wheel to relocate the bass. If they are scattered, go somewhere else and come back at a later time to see if they have re-grouped.
- Target multiple ledge depths. Work shallow ledges (5' at top falling to 10-15' of water) to deep ledges (20-25' falling to 40+) and everywhere in between.
- Resist the urge to drive "down" a ledge scanning for bass. Do it the right way (slow and methodical) by "stitching" your way through the ledge.
- Don't overlook very subtle ledges with only a few feet of depth change. The obvious ledges are community holes because anybody can find them. The subtle ledges will be less pressured and you can find big schools of bass there just as easily.
- Practice various casting angles once you find a school. The fish may only bite the bait walking down the ledge or like a specific presentation. Experiment.
- 25-30 feet deep is NOT too deep. Use 3/4 oz jigs, 3/4 oz Carolina weights and heavier weights than you are used to in order to reach these depths and still feel the bottom.
- Ledges with muscle beds are popular at Kentucky Lake. While dragging your baits feel for bottom composition changes to locate muscle beds. Often you will get a bite when you feel the bottom change.
- Ledges with road beds, old creek beds, near channel swings, structure, etc... can be good producers. Don't overlook.
- Ledges just outside of bays and coves will hold bass coming out from their spawning grounds and should be targeted earlier in the season.

Directions to Highway U Ramp: Take Highway I-64W / 61N towards Bowling Green. Just after Bowling Green take US-54W. (Be careful passing through Curryville - It is a speed trap!). A few miles after Curryville, stay straight to continue on MO-154W. Follow to the end and at the T intersection turn right on MO-154W/MO-19N. In 5.3 miles turn left on MO-154W (just before the Junction). Go 8.7 miles (passing through Perry) and turn right on MO-107N. Go 2.7 miles and turn left on Highway U (heading West). Travel 1/2 mile down Highway U and the road to the ramp is on your right.

They have tons of awesome baits that have been fooling bass for years. I personally love their Incredi-Craw for jig trailers and Carolina rigs. Check out their new 4" Incredi-Frog which features

G Loomis - With 8 different lines of bass fishing rods (NRX, GLX, E6X, GL2, Classic, Bronzeback Series, Fiber-Blend) you should have no problem finding the perfect rod for whatever type of technique you prefer.

If you've never fished with a G Loomis rod before, you don't know what you are missing. These are some of the most sensitive rods out there and built for serious bass fishermen. www.gloomis.com

SHIMANO

Shimano is by far one of the world's most premier fishing tackle companies and highly respected by bass fishermen everywhere. Given the Curado's great reputation as the gold buy standard of affordability priced bulletproof baitcasters, it's likely there are more of these reels in bass boat rod-lockers than any other make. It's hard to believe that even in the spinning reel world, Shimano hit another home run with their Stradic Ci4 (check the online reviews if you don't believe me). I recently picked up one of their Crucial rods a Bass Pro and let me tell you it is one of the lightest rods I've ever handled.
